Busy Bees
The best start in life

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing in support of the appeal for a primary school place for Ada Erturk, who has attended our nursery from a young age.

Ada is a bright, kind, and engaging child who has formed strong and meaningful relationships with her peers during her time with us. She thrives in familiar environments where she feels secure and supported, and her confidence is closely linked to the presence of trusted friendships and routines.

Ada has recently spent a period out of the country with her family. Given this disruption, we believe it is particularly important for her to transition into a school environment that she already associates with familiarity and comfort. Attending Riverhead Infant School would provide Ada with this sense of continuity, as many of her closest peers from nursery will also be attending the same setting.

The presence of these established friendships would play a significant role in supporting Ada's emotional wellbeing, helping her to settle more quickly and confidently into school life. In our professional experience, children in similar circumstances benefit greatly from such continuity, especially following time away from their usual environment.

We strongly feel that a place at Riverhead Infant School would be in Ada's best interests, supporting both her social development and her overall transition into primary education.

Thank you for considering this appeal.

Yours faithfully,

Bryony-Mealin Holmes
